A Salute

SINCE you have been our inspiration and have helped to make our graduation possible and,
SINCE you have always been ready to defend us, believe in us and guide us to maturity and,
SINCE we are especially aware that our personalities are the consummation of our past experiences, the people we have met and the parents who have reared us and,
SINCE you have so willingly given us of your time and patience and,
SINCE you have been not only our parents but our friends, we the Midshipmen of the Class of 1953, fondly dedicate this book, the symbol of our present success, to our parents who so deserve this small return for their unending sacrifices.

The Midshipmen wish to express their gratitude to you for your understanding and guidance. Our voyage would not have been possible without your help and encouragement.

OUR COURSE HAS BEEN PLANNED. The following pages will log pleasant memories and reveal the set of our sails for voyages to come. The Admiral and his assistants, the Captain, the Pilot, the Navigators, the Midshipmen, the Mates, and the Sailors have worked and played together during the four year voyage. We have learned the ways of citizenship, the game of fair play, and the art of doing. Our individual instruction has motivated us to greater effort, obedience, and opportunity. The smooth sailing in our daily routine has given us harmony in working and learning with others. We are grateful to those who through their help and understanding have prepared us to leave the ship and take our place on shore.

Commercial Art

IN OUR SOPHOMORE year we learn basic design and creative thinking. At first it seems as though we will never be commercial artists, everything is so new and different. As Juniors, however, we begin to do lettering, fashions, advertising comprehensives and finished art. Believe it or not it doesn't seem so hard after all. Now as Seniors we really feel we know what field of art we are best suited and concentrate on it. We are even lucky enough to design the yearbook drawings and have the thrill of seeing our work in print.

ONE OF THE MOST fascinating and popular careers open to women is that of Cosmetology. These students receive thorough training in all phases of the work. Upon graduation they receive a license and a high school diploma.

The fine training in their field presents unlimited opportunities. These are some of the excellent positions offered after graduation—operator stylist, demonstrator, cosmetic consultant, instructor, and shop owner.

THE STANDARDS and the methods of procedure in this department are based on the requirements of the best dressmaking firms. Fashion trends and industrial changes in this field influence our course of dressmaking for the student in this school.

The correct procedure in the making of clothing, from the first marking and cutting out to the last detail of finishing, is both taught and practiced so that students learn to do the work properly and efficiently.

ENGINEERS, draftsmen and other technically trained men require the services of a secretary who too has had special training.

This particular type of secretarial work is one of the most interesting to be found in the business field. In this area where there are so many and such varied industries, there are excellent opportunities for the young woman who possesses the skills required of a good secretary, plus an understanding of how modern industry functions.

Voyage to New Lands

WE SAILED ON THROUGH the dark and peaceful night. Realizing that our journey would soon be over, we gathered together on deck to dream of the joys and happiness that are in store for us in the future.

The air seemed to weave a mysterious spell. A vision appeared — slowly it took shape.

We saw a small cottage where two children were playing. Their mother, who was watching them intently, was none other than Ruth Mann, Mrs. Charlie De Vries. Next door Rosemary DiTacconi was taking a picture of her small son, Al Del Santro, Jr. Down the road a short distance was a very unusual building. At a glance we realized that it was a dog kennel. Ann Behrens was the owner, and to say that she was proud of her venture was putting it mildly.

While spending an evening at the Latin Quarter we saw Louise Piegaro, an accomplished dancer, and Arlene Blickendorfer, a noted comedienne, who were giving top performances. Co-starring with them was Marguerite Piperato, the new singing sensation of the year. The scenery for the revue was designed by Virginia Nufrio and the costumes by Rachel Albano.

Our dreams shifted for a moment to the practical side of life — marriage. In our midst there was a new bride, Mrs. Walter Wilkins, the former Barbara Baer. She was sitting in the garden of her luxurious ranch house, the interior of which has been designed by Agnes Mulford.

In a small village not far from the ranch house was a bakery shop owned by Helen Kayser and Gloria Lewis. They were busily decorating the wedding cake for the reception of Josephine Wardell and Charles Hess.

As we were leaving the bakery, we were stopped by Leona Rosolanko who was the President's private secretary. She surprised us with the news that Shirley Spencer and Florence Masino were painting a mural for the White House. Our dreams went on into the future. Barbara Minto was about to leave on a world tour with her husband, Admiral Petti. Gail Brown and Marilyn Smith, now famous hair stylists, were excited about a much talked of social event — Gerry McDonough's party. Gerry is living in a beautiful mansion with her successful lawyer husband, John Swift.

A modeling school owned by Ceil Simeone and Helen Vaccaro attracted our attention. We stopped in to look around and were delighted to see a fashion show in progress. Alice Muccione was modeling a white ankle length wedding gown which had been designed and made by Adele Edwardo. A soft blue evening dress modeled by Lucille DiFabio and designed by Charlotte Girgenti was shown next. This was followed by a tennis outfit modeled by Jewell Piccone and designed by Congetta Antonelli. These were only a few of the many creations designed and modeled by well known people. At Ceil's suggestion we dined at Beverly Fletcher's famous restaurant. What a fabulous place and what food! The dinner was planned and prepared by Dolores Williams. While in the restaurant we met and chatted with several people whom we knew. Mrs. Donald Gonnelli, the former Gertrude Krug who is the private secretary to the president of the MGM Studios, was chatting with Dolores Fiorillo and Gwendolyn Nannarello, hair stylists for RKO Proctors Motion Picture Studio. While chatting Gwendolyn mentioned that Dolores Scelfo was employed as a bookkeeper at Central Office in Newark.

We left the gaiety of the restaurant and traveled down the main street to an exclusive shop to purchase our gowns for the party. Florence Orcinoli, an outstanding designer, owned the shop. Her exquisite gowns were modeled by Catherine Gaeta and Margie Pomarico. We made our selections and hurried home to get ready for the big event.

When we finally arrived at the party, the entertainment was just beginning. Shirley Glaves, the Mistress of Ceremonies, was introducing Dorothy Thomas and Barbara Moore. They did one of their original dance numbers. Next on the program was a vocal selection by Anna Ware. Last but not least we were entertained with a skit by Eleanor Miller and Joan Warhola. They had just come into prominence as actresses. A reception and dance followed the entertainment.

Evelyn Bondura and Pattie Genakos were chatting with the famous movie star, Marion Auriemma. Mickey Belzel and Toni Gatti were exclaiming over the beautiful house; the interior had been designed by none other than Angela Ferraro.

The dance floor was crowded with young people. What a beautiful sight it was to see them glide over the floor to the strains of lovely music! We spotted Mrs. Carlo Calabrese, the former Louisa Dellanno, who had just been elected Mayor of Newark. She was only one of the many important personages. Ann Marie Liberatore, Lucy Battista, Gertrude Szczech, and Doris Chrystaline were the first women to be chosen as city directors.

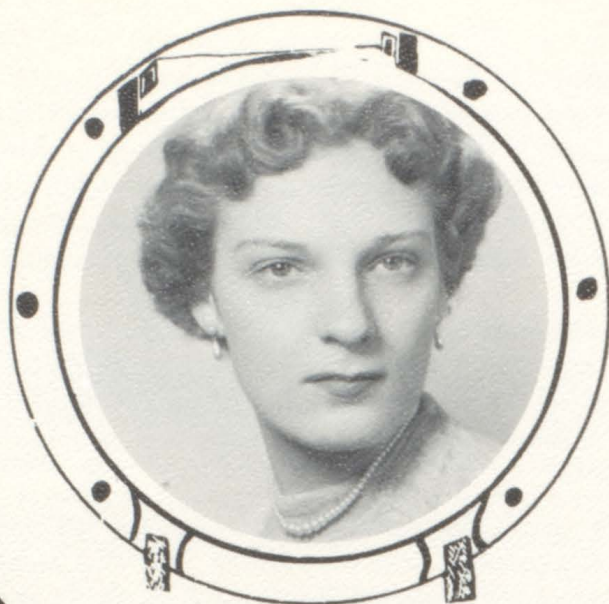

Carmella Iannucci and Marie Cardone, who conduct a school of design, were chatting with Gilda Parisi and Arlene McConnell about the supper that was going to be served. Regina Tyrell and Laverne Dierks had prepared it under the supervision of Ellen French. Ellen plans parties for the elite and is very much in demand by the socially prominent.

Our dreams, becoming more and more vivid, were suddenly interrupted. A storm arose; the boat began to rock; and the vision of the future disappeared into the mounting waves.

Midshipmen Washington

It started when we were in our freshman year. Miss Dearnaley, our class adviser, showed us pictures of Washington and said we could go if we earned the money. So with her suggestions and help we sold greeting cards and made a good start. In the sophomore class with Mrs. Mullis' help we sold cosmetics and added to our fund; as juniors with Mrs. Wood to spur us on we sold magazine subscriptions. When our senior year rolled around, we proudly counted our cash and knew that our trip was assured.

With our Easter outfits, handsome luggage and kodaks, we assembled at "Information" in the Pennsylvania Station where we were met by a Pennsylvania Railroad representative who took us to the train—our special car. In Baltimore we were met by another representative who escorted us to our bus. Of course we took time to pose for pictures.

We had a birdseye view of Baltimore and Fort McHenry, and a delightful visit at the Naval Academy in Annapolis. Regulations there are very strict—no flirting allowed, but the boys seemed to know we were there.

We arrived at our hotel in Washington about six o'clock, were assigned rooms and told to be ready for dinner in a half hour. After dinner we persuaded Miss Dearnaley and Mrs. Richardson to take the moonlight boat ride. We danced under the stars to dreamy music—our partners weren't girls either.

Our trip was so well planned we found time to visit most of the famous places — Mount Vernon, Washington Monument, Jefferson and Lincoln Memorials, Treasury building, Capitol, Pan American building, Arlington Cemetery, Smithsonian Institute and the Mellon Art Gallery. And the White House was lovely—we were lucky to see it because it had just recently been opened to visitors.

We were driving along looking at the sights when the driver stopped the bus and said “Who’s that?” A chorus of “Oh’s” and then “It’s Senator Taft.” In the Senate we had seen Senator Kefauver.

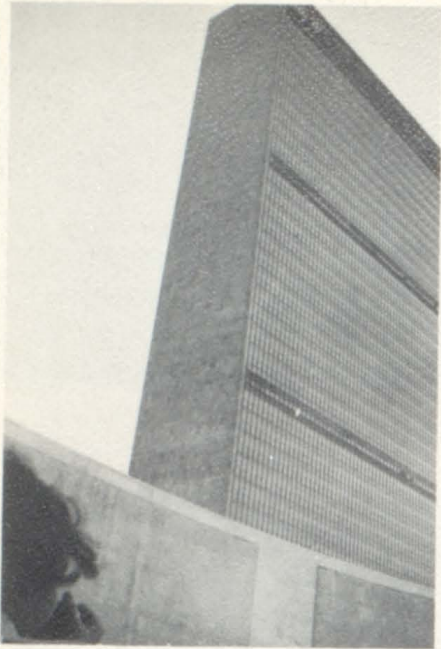

One of the girls had a birthday so we had two beautiful cakes and a birthday party in one of the rooms. We invited some girls from North Carolina to join us. They were lots of fun with their funny accent.

About five o’clock the third day we arrived at the Washington depot, bid our bus driver good-bye, and were feeling a little depressed because our trip was nearly over. The conductor met us, took us into the dining car and the steward gave us menus. We looked once, then twice, and then all at once, “Look Essex County Vocational and Technical High School, Senior Trip to Washington.” Can you imagine a nicer souvenir? Menus made especially for us.

We learned many things in high school, but nothing will stay with us longer than the memories of those three days in Washington.

Our Shore Trip to the U. N.

The day which we had anticipated since our freshman year had finally arrived. At last we were going to see the world famous United Nations Organization in action.

The buses left the school on Monday, October 27, 1952, at 9:00 A.M., and arrived at the United Nations building about three quarters of an hour later.

A most inspiring sight which greeted our eyes was the U.N. flags which fluttered gently in the morning breeze. The flags were a sign that the General Assembly was in session.

As we entered the Assembly Building, we were confronted with a masterpiece of architectural beauty. We found out later that almost every member country had contributed either funds or skilled artists to create this unique masterpiece.

We stood for a moment admiring the building, then a guide came up to our group and directed us to the General Assembly Hall. There our guide briefed us on the United Nations and its functions.

The business of the day commenced. President Pearson presided at the meeting which lasted only a short time. The agenda consisted of voting for members of the Trusteeship Council. Each of us felt just a little closer to the U. N. when the chairman of our delegation, Warren Austin, walked up to cast the vote for the United States. This voting had been carried over from the previous meeting.

After the meeting adjourned, we were taken on a tour of several meeting rooms, one of them being the Security Council where we were told of the work carried on in that room.

We were unable to have lunch in the U. N. building so we had to divide into small groups and go into the restaurants in the surrounding area.

Since a General Assembly meeting was not scheduled for the afternoon, several girls attended minor meetings while others interviewed diplomats, ambassadors, and representatives from many nations. Some girls went on tours which were being conducted throughout the entire building.

We purchased articles from the gift shop and the book shop, both of which are located in the building.

The day was ended, yet it will live forever in our hearts and in our memory. As the buses pulled away, we humbly looked back at the building which holds in its palm the future of the entire world.

Yes, if we look behind the scenes, this is what the technical staff might be doing! Co-ordination is what brings the dramatic picture into focus. Scene changes, props, costumes check, cues, lights, curtains—and the behind-the-scene workers give way to the stars who have a story to enact.

Ship's Dramatic Club

"All the world's a stage . . ." How true this is for the students of drama. Apart from the other bustling activities of the school is the stage where a scene of fantasy is brought to life or earnest realism interpreted as the drama student is so inspired.

Only on the stage could a story unfold the tale of eight little girls, one prettier than the next, who have the kindest, wisest, and merriest grandmother anyone ever had! Bring the picture to life; hear the girls speak and see their emotions placed into gestures and actions! Perhaps you already have been told their story; if not look again!

"YO HO MY HEARTIES"

One of the many coordinated programs between the girls' school and the boys' schools of our county is the sports program. We select three separate squads of cheerleaders to represent the Newark, Irvington and Bloomfield Schools. The girls are uniformed by the schools and are given the privilege of cheering at all football and basketball games. The pep, enthusiasm and sportsmanship shown by our girls at the games is certainly an inspiration to our boys' teams in their fight for victory.

Now that we have sailed into port and are prepared to take our place on shore, we would like to bid you all farewell.

As we look back on the four year voyage, we see not only books and education, but the pleasant memories of many happy occasions. We recall our navigators as understanding friends, our shipmates as fun-loving girls. We thank our parents for making our trip possible and for contributing so generously to its success.

These are the memories that the midshipmen will always cherish. It is from all of this that we must now leave and say, Farewell.

Bon Voyage!

Farewell... on your safe journey
through your trip
life.
